

What's happening at Nakatsu High School??

A Day in the Life of a Student.

I am walking up the hill to get to school from Nakatsugawa station for 10mins. Well, now I'm tired as usual.

In my class, some are studying, and others are reading books. Everyone is doing whatever they want to do. Of course no one is doing their assignments now though, right?

At 8:25, my teacher starts SHR. No one is late today. We check our schedules for today.

At 8:40, the first period is classic Japanese which is my favorite class. I'm giving more than a passing thought to luscious stories. Awe.

At 9:30, recess between classes. Why is everyone reading text books? ...oh, ok. The second period is English, which means we will have a quiz.

At 9:40, class started with greetings in English. Today's theme is security. Learning gestures is also important in using English.

At 10:30, ok next is physics. Let's go to the physics room.
10:40, today is about the bounce of balls. These balls are moving in unpredictable ways. How can we predict?! It's so interesting for us.

At 11:40, Because I want to be a kindergarden teacher, I take Music class. I'm so excited for my senior year! Then, I will be able to have more Music classes.

12:30-13:10 - It's time to eat lunch! Today's lunch is a bun from the canteen and soymilk from the vending machine, because I got up late and did not have enough time to make my lunch. Oops.

At 13:10, the fifth period is Social Studies. It is about social disease today. Because my teacher is teaching us with his drawings, I am having fun learning this difficult topic.

At 14:10, Math time. Today's lesson is linear function. Though it is started from " $y=ax$ " which we learned in Junior High, it is getting harder and harder... Thanks to myself for having done the prep for today's lesson last night.

At 15:00, today's classes are all done! Well, we will still have cleaning time and SHR though.

15:40-18:00 - It is club activity time! Almost all students belong to clubs.
